Can't print from Collabora on Chrome OS?

I talked my mother into getting a Chromebook to replace her old Windows 7 laptop and I'm trying to set it up for her. Had a hard time getting it to work with her printer which is too old to work off the network. I got it working by telling Chrome OS it was an HP and then trying similar sounding printer drivers until one worked so we can now print from Chrome.

Collabora will be her main app for word processing but it seems to have its own printer dialogue which doesn't see the printer I set up. The only options in the printer dialogue are print to PDF and search for printers. Print to PDF works as expected but search just hangs.

Do I have to do something with Collabora to tell it what printers are installed?

Sure - it's easy - the SDK has documentation here:

https://sdk.collaboraonline.com/docs/How_to_integrate.html 2

See:

1. PutRelativeFile that creates a new file with the body of the POST verb for the needs of the Save As operation when invoked with

https://<...>/wopi/files/?access_token=

URL. If you do not want to support the Save As operation, please add UserCanNotWriteRelative with value true to your CheckFileInfo answer. It is request header X-WOPI-SuggestedTarget that is supported. Please note that PutRelativeFile is supported since Collabora Online 2.1.5.

Hope that helps.

Yes I think the important parts are:

1. Set the environment variable 'domain'
You need to set the env var 'domain' of your collaboara server to all domains your server is used from .
You can use regex here. For example I am using:

```
domain=(\.foo\.com|\.another-foo\.de)

2. Tweak the loolwsd.xml in the loolwsd.xml file you need to set the frame_ancestors also to all domains. But this is a value used for HTTP Header and you can NOT use regex. For example I am using

<frame_ancestors>*.foo.com *.another-foo.de</frame_ancestors>
```

3. The storage settings again in the loolwsd.xml file you need to set the allowed hosts. Here I am using:

```
<storage desc="Backend storage">
  <filesystem allow="false" />
  <wopi allow="true">
    <host allow="true">demo1.foo.com</host>
    <host allow="true">demo2.another-foo.de</host>
```

Triggering the change

- Sometimes questions reveal bugs
- Even though not an official issue tracking channel, this may initiate development of a fix

Identically good or identically bad? 🤔
The first version containing the bug was CODE 6.4.5. It isn't yet in a LibreOffice release, though the 7.1.1 RC1 should contain it.
